CREATING AN ADVANCED LEARNING ENVIRONMENT

LANGSTON UNIVERSITY — A Greenhouse In The Plains

In Central Oklahoma, about 45 miles north of Oklahoma City, stands a greenhouse for the intellectually undernourished. "Stands" really does not fit the description of this greenhouse; advancing like a cavalier charge would be more appropriate. The greenhouse is Langston University, a predominantly Negro institution founded in 1897 by the Oklahoma legislature.

Since 1960, when alumnus Dr. William H. Hale assumed the presidency, Langston University has embarked on an expansion program which has resulted in higher enrollment, an improved faculty and curriculum, and a bright, energetic university image. It has also resulted in a revitalized physical plant: two dormitories, a student union, twelve faculty apartments, three academic buildings. Presently under construction are two dormitories and 36 faculty and married student housing units.

The "greenhouse" concept is President Hale's own, and it aptly describes Langston's role in higher education in Oklahoma. Without a doubt, Langston offers opportunities to those who otherwise would not attend college.

With all his success in expanding Langston's physical plant, Dr. Hale is quick to note his primary objective. "The physical environment is not important in itself; it is important insofar as it contributes to our real work, which is the business of teaching and learning."

FIRST PHASE OF PLANT IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM COMPLETED IN 1964

SECOND PHASE COMPLETED IN 1968

First Phase: twelve faculty apartments, student union, two residence halls and conversion of what had been the Sanford Dining Hall into Sanford Annex, a modern residence facility. Second Phase: three academic buildings and renovation of present I. W. Young Auditorium and G. Lamar Harrison Library.

(Daily Leader Staff)

Gray clouds hung over Langston University as students gathered to pay their tribute to a fallen leader, and a soft, gentle rain fell--a rain that seemed somehow to express the sadness and deeply felt loss of a truly selfless man, Martin Luther King, Jr.

Rain that seemed somehow right, so appropriate to the occasion.

at Langston University as in Atlanta, Georgia, as in thousands of other cities, people gathered in stunned sadness. That sadness was felt deeply on Langston's campus as students, faculty and administrative staff members assembled briefly in their own tribute, and to re-dedicate themselves to the principles of Dr. King--peace, understanding, human dignity and above all equality of opportunity.

The rain stopped shortly before the students marched to the flagpole for their brief service.

Dr. John W. Coleman, University Chaplain, gave the invocation that preceded announcement by Jerry Driver, President of the Student Government Association of $700 already contributed for a scholarship founded in Dr. King's honor to be known as the "Martin Luther King Leadership Award".

Dr. William H. Hale, President of Langston University, eulogized Dr. King in a short address which follows:

"We assemble here for a brief moment to pay tribute to the memory of a great man. At this very same time in the City of Atlanta, many of the great people of the world are also assembling for this purpose.

"I think it important for you to know that we, too, are represented there in Atlanta. Mrs. Hale is there on behalf of the Langston University family extending our sympathies to Mrs. King. Martin Luther King was not just a name to me for he and I have been friends since he was a student at Morehouse College and Mrs. Hale and I were professors at Clark College in Atlanta, Georgia.

"I have known the Reverend Ralph Abernathy since he was a student of mine at the Alabama State College in Montgomery, Alabama, the place where Dr. King first saw his burning bush.

MARTIN LUTHER KING
(April 9, 1968)

Martin Luther King believed that every man should be free;
A sniper took his life in Memphis, Tennessee.
He stood up for what he believed and fought like a man
Shouting, "Let freedom ring all over this land.
I dreamed that every man would be free";
He was giving words to the people in Memphis, Tennessee.

A bullet came out of the night striking him dead;
Not a mournful word from his mouth was said.
Before his death he was letting the nation know;
The colored man was not standing cruelly anymore.

We want pay equal to our jobs;
Now he is dead and this nation sobs.
Now, preachers and teachers, do your duty and let his golden message hurl Carrying peace and freedom all over this world.

--Joe E. Wilson (Langston University Junior from Chicago majoring in sociology.)

"Mrs. Hale also carries with her from the Langston University family my personal check of $100 to help carry on the work so nobly begun by this fallen leader.

"Just as I think it is important for you to know that, I think it even more important for the people of this state and nation to know that the world has not gone completely mad; that the unhappy spectacle of wild, insane and utterly irresponsible conduct, to which our country is presently being subjected, is far from being universal. I commend our students for the way in which you have carried yourselves during these troublous days and I am reminded of the calm demeanor of John Brown, another who died in the cause of freedom. It is fortunate for our free society that John Brown was not slain at Harper's Ferry for in the interlude between his capture and his death, he was able to give purpose to his life and to call our nation to an accounting with its conscience.

"All last Thursday night following the tragic news, my telephone rang continuously and through grief spoken voices of students at the other end was always the question--'what are we going to do?' You know my answer... 'The first thing we are going to do in the morning is to place our flag at half mast and then we are going to have a little memorial service, then we are going to go on with the important work which lies before us.' And on last Friday we did just that.

"I have never been so proud of you in all my life as I have been during the past few days. Anyone can act rationally when there is no stress. But you have acted rationally under the greatest stress imaginable. I can hear again the statements made by our students on last Friday when, through your tears and grief, you assured the world that you would continue our attempt to help make this great nation greater; to make the promise of America real to black, and red and yellow and white boys and girls alike. But there was no rancor in your voice or your words. There was no hate, no malice. There was sorrow, yes. But your accent was on calmness, on restraint, on understanding and on those principles of active non-violence for which Dr. King so dearly sold his life.

"Some not so wise have said to me, why don't we dispense with classes for a whole week? Others have said, why should we have classes this afternoon? My answer was, 'We cannot afford to, for we have much work that must be done and if we do not do it, who is there to do it? We are the darker members of that group for whom Dr. King died. We need more than many others and, therefore, we must do more than others. Not through force, not through constraint, not through compulsion, but because we, too, have dimly glimpsed that city which lies in the promised land and after one such sight, no darkness can obscure that vision.'

"There are those who ask of the future and who is to take King's place. My answer to that is the American people. This is not a Negro movement, or a white movement, it is a movement aimed at freedom for all people. This is Dr. King's legacy to us. Let us nurture it proudly."

At the close of the address, the plaintive notes of taps, flowed out over the campus, and at that moment, the sun burst through the clouds to warm the gathered throng, and this, too, seemed right.

Right because although a leader had fallen, his work will be continued. Right, because hopefully men and women of all races will unite more strongly in their efforts to raise mankind to its highest level, and do it peacefully, thoughtfully, with dignity and understanding, but most of all, with equality.

With the award to the Martin Luther King Leadership Award, donations should be made to the Langston University Development Foundation. All correspondence should be addressed to the Office of the Business Manager, Langston University.

The award will be made to a Langston student above the freshman level who has met requirements of responsible leadership in scholastic performance in student affairs and community concern.

LANGSTON UNIVERSITY MEMORIAL SERVICES for Martin Luther King, Jr., drew about 300 students, faculty and staff members during services conducted at Langston University at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday. Dr. William Hale, Langston president, eulogized King as a "leader not of the Negro alone, but of all races who strive for individual dignity and opportunity." (Daily Leader Photo)

Memorial to Sen. Kennedy

A memorial service for the late Sen. Robert F. Kennedy was held June 9, in the Music Hall Auditorium at Langston University.

A PRAYER OR ANOTHER DREAM

O God, great and loving Master of the living and the dead
Guide our troubled hearts remembering that once for Freedom
another bleeds
Help the family of Robert Kennedy to Understand
That Life lived profitably requires much demand

Grant our Nation the strength O Lord, to welcome men who have dreams that never were and say Why Not?

Teach us Our God, to live together
For surely, we will die together

Help us to recapture once again that love of a United America
once called Our Sacred Plot

O Spirit of Truth! Help us to realize that love is our greatest endeavor

--Sheila Ray
(Langston University Senior)

On June 9, the day of national mourning for the late Senator Robert F. Kennedy, memorial services were held in the Music Hall Theatre. The services included: Scripture, Linda Stigall; Prayer and Concerns of the Fellowship, Dr. Jno. W. Coleman, University Chaplain; Poetry, Mrs. Minta Hopkins and Miss Sheila Ray; and special selections, "Nearer my God to Thee" and "Have Thine own Way", were sung by Mrs. George M. Green. The meditation message, "Words of the Thankful Tribute", was delivered by Dr. William H. Hale, University President.

Dr. Hale eulogized Senator Kennedy as follows:

The President of our nation has proclaimed this day, June 9, 1968, as a day of mourning for the late Robert Francis Kennedy who was laid low by the bullets of an assassin. Today we join with our President and our fellow Americans; and indeed with millions of people all over this world, in paying our last respects to this great man who dared to speak for the underdog - the little people of the earth - and in so doing earned for himself a martyr's grave in Arlington National Cemetery and immortality in the hearts of all men of good will - present and future - who dream as he did of a better, a fairer, a more equitable society than any this tired old world has ever known.

In the brief time that I shall speak with you this morning I shall not dwell on this monstrous act itself, for we are all saddened and sobered by what has happened. I want to speak, (1) of our nations collective responsibility for what happened in Los Angeles and in Memphis and in Dallas, (2) of the courage of some others who have dared to speak the truths as did the child in Hans Christian Andersen's "The Emperor's New Suit", "but the Emperor has no clothes on" and finally, (3) to try and glean from the other two some signs of hope for the future.

The question of who is responsible for the death of Bobby Kennedy will be debated by historians and others for a long time to come and no matter what the courts may decide, with respect to the fate of the man who pulled the trigger, the question will still remain and I suggest that it has great meaning for us here at Langston University.

I say that Sirhan Bishara Sirhan was merely a tool, an instrument, the bomb, if you will, that did the bidding of a non-caring society. The question of whether it is the individual person who initiates action and therefore social changes, or whether it is the influence of social forces that are responsible, has been debated by social scientists ever since Thomas Carlyle and his so called "great man" theory. The great man theory sees the individual as the responsible party. It would hold that without Danton Robespierre there would have been no French Revolution, without Tom Paine and George Washington and Sam Adams and Patrick Henry and Thomas Jefferson, there would have been no American Revolution; without the Duke of Wellington and Marshal Blucher there would have been no Waterloo for Napoleon; without Abraham Lincoln there would have been no Civil War and an end to human slavery in this country; without Franklin Delano Roosevelt there would have been no "new deal"; without Chief Justice Roger Brooke Taney, there would not have been no Dred Scott decision; without Chief Justice Earl Warren, there would have been no court decision outlawing segregation in the schools. On the other hand, those who charge society and its social forces with responsibility claim that certain historical processes once set in motion will continue on and, eventually, when the time is ripe, some insightful and foresighted individual will bring the thing to its logical conclusion. Whether or not any of the people I have named had ever lived, according to this theory, the social changes which their individual efforts motivated, would have occurred, but perhaps not at that exact time.

How does this relate to our concern this morning? I say that our nation has consistently, and over a long period of time, placed little value on human life. Think, if you will, of the hundreds of Negroes in the south whose deaths at the hands of lynch mobs hardly made a stir in the newspapers and have never been solved. Nor has anyone ever been brought before the bar of justice. What of Medgers Evers and Emmitt Till in Mississippi and the two men and their wives in Georgia? What of the Episcopalian Priest and the New England white woman for whose murders no one has ever paid. I can never forget, when as a boy, I read of the burning of the Sherman Texas Court House to lynch a Negro man who was alleged to have raped a white woman. The fact that subsequently the law was to absolve him of the crime was small comfort to his family. Now, society as such did not actually perpetrate these crimes, but the fact that they were and are permitted to go on, is in a sense the provision of a license and the declaration of an open season on those with whom one does not agree.

I strongly suspect that the families of the victims I have mentioned mourned their passing just as much as do the families of Martin Luther King and the Kennedy brothers.

Those of us today who feel that the struggle for human rights and dignity is a phenomenon that had its inception with the second half of the 20th Century reveal an appalling ignorance of the facts of history. Across the centuries in every age and clime there have been those who dared to speak for right. Their names are legions: Jesus of Nazareth, Socrates of Athens, William Pitts, the younger, of England, Thaddeus Stevens and John Brown of Harpers Ferry of the United States, to mention only a few.

I want to say just a few words about one man in particular who, though practically unknown to the "now" generation, earned and earned well his place in the hall of fame of those who loved justice and fairness. As I thought of this man, it came to my mind that we should introduce a course in our curriculum that will adequately deal with such people, and I should love to teach that course. It might be called by one of several names such as "The Dissenters," or "The Champions of lost Causes," or "The Makers of the Minority Report". At any rate, I think it is a subject worthy of our serious consideration. The man I have in mind this morning was a New England aristocrat. Wendell Phillips was his name. He was born in 1811 and died in 1884. During his brief span of 73 years he involved himself in a thankless labor of love to, (1) help bring about the end of human slavery and, (2) with that legally accomplished to help the freed man achieve the position of equality which the Constitution and the laws described to him. Phillips was graduated from the Harvard Law School in 1831 and was admitted to the bar in 1834. Recognized as a top lawyer, he turned from that lucrative and high status profession and gave his life to righting the wrongs done by America to the millions of black people, whose only crime was their weakness and their ignorance. So Phillips became a confirmed abolitionist and a follower and disciple of William England aristocrat who was laboring in the field of human dignity. Phillips sprang to prominence in the abolitionist movement when on December 8, 1837, he gave an impromptu speech in Boston's Faneuil Hall protesting the murder in Alton, Illinois of the great anti-slavery leader, Elijah Lovejoy. From this time on to the Civil War, Phillips acted as Garrison's lieutenant until finally in 1864, he disagreed with Garrison on the matter of Lincoln's reelection, which Phillips opposed. He also rejected Garrison's argument that the American anti-slavery society had concluded his mission and should be abolished. He became the leader of the movement and served with it until his death because he felt - and history has proved him right - that the struggle had just begun.

What of the future? I frankly do not know. I do know that we cannot hope to survive as a nation if we continue to permit the permanent eclipsing of our brightest stars. What we must have is a new look at ourselves and at our own individual and collective responsibilities. What we must have is the development of an attitude of concern for our nation and, therefore, for every one of that nation's people. Should and must this be done because of the love we should bear for our country? Yes. Is it because it is right that people should care about other people? Yes. Is this because it is a mandate of our Judeo-Christian tradition that "as ye would that men would do unto you, do ye also unto them likewise?" Yes. But over and beyond these reasons for development of sincere feeling of concern and caring is the fact which no thinking person can any longer deny; namely, that it is a necessary condition to our survival.

We will either come to grips with our problem, using all the intelligence and good will of which we are capable, or we will, by our refusal, or inability, or unwillingness, to do so doom our nation to share the fate of the thousands of other civilizations whose cultural bones litter the rights of way of history - because they, too, did not care. If Bobby Kennedy's passing helps in any way to move closer to that goal of a nation of responsible people concerned about everyone of its members, he shall not have died in vain.

Dick Gregory Visit Irks A&M Regents

KINGSTON — The visit of Dick Gregory, former comedian and Negro civil rights militant, to Oklahoma campuses later this month prompted a warning Friday from the governing regents of two of the campuses.

The Board of Regents for Oklahoma A&M Colleges, meeting at Lake Texoma State Lodge, reacted to a report that Gregory had added Langston University to his previously announced visits to Oklahoma State University, Stillwater, and the University of Oklahoma, Norman.

Dr. William Hale, Langston president, told his regents Gregory would spend the day of September 18 at Langston before going to OSU that night. Gregory is to appear at OU on September 20.

Hale said Langston was able to draw Gregory for $800 — "a reduced price."

"He is part of the revolution, I would say, a folk hero, and the students wanted him," Hale said.

The regents questioned Hale about the procedure used to invite Gregory to the campus. He replied that students had asked a regularly constituted advisory committee to extend the invitation.

After some discussion of Gregory's activities in civil rights and his recent arrest in Chicago for participating in demonstrations during the Democratic National Convention, regent Robert Hartley of Vinita said:

"I think if that guy violates the law of Oklahoma, he ought to be prosecuted."

1,500 Hear

Gregory Supports Negro Education

A self-claimed, write-in candidate for the U. S. Presidency received approving cheers from about 1,500 students at Langston University Wednesday.

Dick Gregory, a former comedian, utilized humor to illustrate certain topics during his morning speaking engagement at the university.

He urged the students at the predominately Negro school to attend all-Negro schools for four years and attend white schools for four years to "demonstrate."

Langston University, Gregory said, was only the second predominately Negro college to invite him to speak, since he assumed the role as a civil rights activist. He claimed he has addressed more college audiences during the past year than any other campus speaker.

Also at Langston, Gregory spent practically the entire day visiting with members of the Student Senate and LU President and Mrs. William H. Hale.

Students Gregory

At one point during his address, Gregory told LU students "If I am elected president, I don't expect to have an all Negro cabinet, but the white man will have to ask me 100 more questions than the Negro if he expects to get a job."

He also promised, if elected president, to paint the White House black.

Although Gregory is not listed on the ballot for the general election, his campaign buttons proclaim "Dick Gregory, Write-in Candidate."

He also took the opportunity during his talk to toss barbs at the three major presidential candidates - Richard Nixon, Hubert Humphrey and George Wallace - and also President Johnson.

Gregory admitted Nixon was his choice of the major candidates, but he called the decision "the lesser of two evils."

During his address he said the 1968 general election would be beneficial from the standpoint it can tell how many anti-Negro votes there are from the Wallace vote.

Gregory noted students from a predominately Negro school, during his Langston address, actually have a better chance for employment in today's upheaval than a Harvard honor student.

Gregory's address, especially during his talk at Oklahoma State University Wednesday evening, maintained the current leadership in the nation ignores the 30 million black Americans and also the Indian-Americans, Mexican-Americans and Puerto Rican-Americans and the "poor whites."

The speaker was scheduled to address a University of Arizona audience Thursday evening in Tucson and return to Oklahoma Friday to address a gathering at the University of Oklahoma in Norman.

Reports indicated Gregory is being paid almost $3,000 for his three engagements in Oklahoma.

Langston Hall Packed For Gregory's Speech

By Robert B. Allen
Staff Writer

LANGSTON — Dick Gregory, who traded his role as a comedian for one as a civil rights activist, came to Langston University Wednesday maintaining that he still is a write-in candidate for president of the United States.

"I am covering as much territory as I can to spell out my platform," Gregory said. "There must be a rebirth of American democracy. Our freedom has been strangled by lawmakers who refuse to respect the Bill of Rights."

The controversial Negro leader came to Langston to address students at an assembly program. Almost an hour before his talk, the auditorium was filled to overflowing.

Speck Reynolds, an assistant director of fund development and public relations at Langston, estimated the attendance at more than 1,500.

Gregory, dressed in a safari jacket and khaki trousers, got a big ovation as he walked down the aisle of the auditorium to the stage, accompanied by Dr. William Hale, Langston president.

Hale said Gregory came to Langston after arrangements already had been made for him to appear at Oklahoma State University and the University of Oklahoma. Gregory is scheduled to speak at OSU Wednesday night and at OU Friday night.

Pacifist Views Stated

Gregory's visit to the state, his second this year, is expected to net him about $3,000 in speaking fees. Dr. Hale said the former comedian will receive $800 for his Langston appearance.

Gregory, who has been jailed repeatedly since 1963 at civil rights demonstrations, visited Henryetta last June to speak to Indians attending the National Aboriginal Traditional Indian Conference.

"I will probably make a similar talk to Oklahomans this time," the bearded Gregory said Wednesday. Talking to newsmen briefly before going to the stage at Langston, he said he wanted it understood that he is a pacifist and "I am opposed not only to the war in Vietnam but to all wars as a means of settling disagreements between nations."

Support Predicted

He made no secret that some of his views are controversial, ranging from his refusal to entertain American troops in Vietnam to demonstrating at the Democratic National Convention last month in Chicago.

Gregory said he is disturbed because the nation's leadership has ignored 30 million black Americans as full participating citizens.

"I am sick and tired of having to apologize for the acceptance of public aid by needy people," he said. He plans to continue to stomp the country as a poor man's candidate for the presidency and predicted, "I'm going to get a lot more support than many people think because they are sick and tired too of the way things are going."

Among those arriving early to hear Gregory at Langston were 56 sixth graders brought to the university by bus from Longfellow Elementary School in Oklahoma City. They were accompanied by two teachers.

THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNIVERSITY

William H. Hale, MA, PhD, LHD

William H. Hale is the first alumnus to become president. A feature story appearing in The Sunday Oklahoman (December 22, 1968) had this to say: "When Dr. William H. Hale returned to Langston University in 1960, he found his alma mater, integrated by law for six years, slipping into oblivion—ironically, the victim of integration.

"Dr. Hale decided the University had to have a new image, that it needed physical and academic improvements. Now, the once obscure image of the University is changing. The school, ten years older than Oklahoma, is percentagewise the second fastest growing four-year college in the state.

"Langston's buildings, once a scattering of red brick structures, now spread over the 40-acre campus. The president wants Langston to fill the cultural and educational gaps of students, some long deprived and neglected. He states his aim as tenth president of the once all-Negro university: to provide a greenhouse for the intellectually undernourished.

"President William H. Hale believes in Langston."

President Hale engages in serious conversation with the Honorable Fred R. Harris, Oklahoma State Senator.

1968-69 BASKETBALL TEAM

The Langston Lions' 1968-69 season was a success. The Oklahoma Collegiate Athletic Conference coaches had picked the Lions to finish in the cellar of the ten-team circuit, but Coach Bernard Crowell's quintet surprised the "experts" and punched out a 9-9 league record, finishing sixth.

Langston slapped a defeat on all conference opponents including an 88-74 victory over the conference champions, Southwestern State. The Lions finished third in the conference tournament at Edmond with a 69-62 win over Phillips University.

Co-captain Mike Harris closed out his basketball career with the Lions. The Oklahoma City senior fired 487 points through the strings for an 18.7 average. This was good enough for the fourth spot in the conference scoring race.

Two other Lions scored in double figures, Joe Cummings, 13.6, and Fred Lewis, 10.6. Cummings was number two in the conference in scoring accuracy from the field with 54 percent. He hit 113 of 207 field goals.

Mike Harris was named to the second team in the Oklahoma Collegiate Athletic Conference.
